The Desolation of the Virgin Mary (extrait 1)

While you seem to be extinguished together with Jesus,
I hear your voice, trembling and interrupted by sobs, saying:

*“ Son, O Beloved Son, this is the last relief which is left to Me, which softens my pains:
-pouring Myself out on the wounds of your Most Holy Humanity ,
-adoring them, kissing them.*

And now this too is taken away from Me. The Divine Will wants it so.
And I resign Myself. But know, Son, that I want it and I can not.
At the mere thought of doing it, my strengths leave Me and life runs away from Me.

O beloved Son. Son, how You are reduced!
What an awful crafting sin has made upon your most holy Limbs!

Adored Son, how disfigured You are!
Ah, if love did not tell Me that You are my Son, my Life, my All,
I would not recognize You. »

Luisa : Ah! how much would your inseparable Mama want to give You back your original beauty!

Astonished you look at the wide wound of this Heart.
You kiss it. You touch the Blood.

And feeling the Life of Jesus in Yourself,
-You have the strength to fulfill the bitter separation.
Then You embrace Him, and You allow the sepulchral stone to close!...

With a superhuman effort you detach yourself from the tomb.
And you return to Jerusalem along the same path from which you came.

After only a few steps, You are already before the Cross on which Jesus suffered so much and died. You run to embrace It. You see the Cross colored with Blood.

The pains that Jesus suffered on It are renewed in your Heart, one by one. You are unable to contain so much pain....
